Öland Potato Dumplings

Since these are boiled and the potatoes are starchy, they are a bit sticky but eased with a coating of cream and soothed with lingonberry jam. Very comforting, and very popular in Sweden, food for Vikings!

The Idea

The Alligator is the brainchild of innovator Benny Engdahl, who got tired of chopping onions when he was making his favourite dish – Öland dumplings filled with pork. They require large quantities of chopped potatoes and onions, and everyone knows that chopping onions is a tearful affair, but it need not be any longer.

Benny Engdahl contacted his friend, graduate engineer Nikola Knezevic, who became responsible for the technical development of the product. Many prototypes were needed to find the right design, the right materials, and, in particular, the right steel for the cutters, before the final product was ready for commercial launch. The Swedish patent was granted in October 2001.

The product received a great deal of attention right from the start and quickly became a success, with sharply rising sales and many satisfied customers.

Alligator Grater & Julienne Peeler (2-in-1)

Dual grater and julienne

The Alligator Grater has two sizes of grating slots for cheese, chocolate, citrus zesting, hard fruits and vegetables.

The two sizes of the Julienne peeler produce coarse and fine strips to put the finishing touches to salads, to make garnishes and vegetable dishes.

The high quality Japanese stainless steel ensures the durability and sharpness of the blades. A good and stable grip helps to prevent injury while grating or julienne slicing.

Alligator Slicer

In a classic potato gratin, thinly sliced potatoes and onions soak up all the goodness of a milk and cream mixture that has been spiked with nutmeg. A sprinkling of grated Gruyere cheese on top becomes gooey in the oven. Using an Alligator Slicer creates perfect slices, which helps the gratin cook more evenly.
